LITIGATION

JOHN F. MARTIN III

E. Powell Miller holds "Shoeless" Joe Jackson's bat and baseball signed by Babe Ruth; Marc Newman holds a basketball signed by the 1982 NCAA-champion North Carolina Tar Heels, including freshman Michael Jordan; and David Fink holds a football signed by Heisman Trophy winners.

Call it the modern day equivalent of going out for ice cream after a Little League win—E. Powell Miller celebrates each legal victory by making an addition to his high-end political and sports memorabilia collection. Seeing as how Mr. Miller has obtained in excess of $500 million in settlements over the last few years, this accumulation has become quite expansive. A $14 million recovery in one case resulted in an original letter from George Washington dated November 12, 1776, written at a time when the Continental Army was on the verge of being decimated, in which he requested more regiments for the war; another successful case brought in a game-used bat once owned by "Shoeless" Joe Jackson; and other victories resulted in balls signed by Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, and a nationally-ranked "T 206" baseball card collection.

Headquartered in Rochester, Michigan, The Miller Law Firm is a boutique litigation firm that litigates all over the country, possessing extensive experience and an outstanding track record on both the plaintiff and defense sides of commercial and class action matters. Recently, The Miller Law Firm was appointed co-Lead Counsel in the AIG Securities Litigation. These accomplishments have been achieved through the stellar work of the firm's twenty members, whose seamless teamwork and thorough trial preparation make the threat of the courtroom an all-too-real possibility for any and all of their opponents. This reputation is complemented by the firm's willingness to enter into alternative fee arrangements that align interests between client and attorney, ranging from full contingency fee agreements to blended contingency-hourly billing arrangements.

The firm's successes are bolstered by the distinguished individuals that also help create and maintain the positive firm culture. David Fink served in Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm's cabinet, having previously been the managing partner of his own successful Michigan law firm, and Marc L. Newman is believed to be the youngest lawyer in Michigan to have achieved the recognition of one of the "Top 100" Attorneys in Michigan in 2008 by Super Lawyers magazine.

The Miller Law Firm was selected as a Go-To Law Firm® in Litigation by Penske Automotive Group.
